Competitive regulation moves betting onshore

Ontario's online sports betting channelisation rose sharply following the market opening, moving from 5% in gross gambling revenue (GGR) in 2022 to 85% in 2023 and stabilising above 90% thereafter. Alberta is forecast to follow a similar trajectory, while the Rest of Canada remains largely unchanged at low double-digit levels. The contrast highlights the role of competitive regulated markets in moving betting activity onshore and into visible, monitored channels.

Building a stronger integrity culture through athlete education in Canada

Protecting the integrity of sport starts with empowering athletes. As Canada's regulated sports betting market continues to develop, IBIA has invested in athlete education to help players understand the integrity risks, meet their responsibilities and protect the competitions they represent.

Launched through a CA$300,000 commitment from IBIA and its members, bet365, Betway and FanDuel, the programme is built around IBIA's 3Rs approach: Rules, Responsibility and Reporting. IBIA Education Ambassador Jean-François Reymond has played a key role in delivering practical in-person sessions, using real-world examples to engage athletes on betting risks, integrity obligations and how to report concerns.

The programme has already been delivered to nearly 200 Canadian Premier League (CPL) players and staff in collaboration with PFA Canada. It was recently extended to all Canadian Football League (CFL) athletes through a dedicated integrity education initiative run in partnership with Genius Sports.

IBIA's work in Canada shows that integrity is built through collaboration. When athletes, leagues, integrity experts and regulated betting operators work together, sport is better equipped to remain fair, transparent and trusted.

IBIA has invested in athlete education to help players understand the integrity risks, meet their responsibilities and protect the competitions they represent.
